

ne, which was slightly objected to as illegit and ultra vires, because the subject was referred from the one diocese to the other, and was not a subject of joint reference from the Synods of all the dioceses, as is required by the 24th constitution.

It is to be hoped that before long this requirement of the constitution may be amended, and that the reference from the diocesan Synod alone may be made sufficient to allow a diocese to claim the decision of the Provincial Synod on the subject referred to it—such decision being binding on the diocese which refers the subject for decision, and on all others. This amendment was proposed by me three years ago.

The observation then that the present position of our Church in this diocese has not been as yet affected in the slightest degree by any determination of the Provincial Synod, and with the expectation of my hope that the future course of the Synod may be more profitable than the past, are the chief reasons why I have been less than the head of our Provincial Synod, I have been, I think, less than the head of our Provincial Synod, I have been, I think, less than the head of our Provincial Synod, I have been, I think, less than the head of our Provincial Synod.

THE GENERAL SYNOD.

Authors of great eminence have expressed their alarm at the difficulty and danger of discussing events which were really occurred. The difficulty arises from the fact that ice which may still remain in the minds of those who have taken part so recently in these events. The danger is not the supposition of a general disappointment and anger which have rotted in the hearts of the people, but the self-righteousness and self-righteousness of the people, and which have not been as yet subdued, or corrected by time. Self-control, however, and candour, and that Christian charity, which is not puffed up, and does not behave itself as if it knew all, are so conspicuous in the deliberations of our General Conference, and General Synod that there need be no fear of difficulty or danger in my attempt to lay before you some remarks on the discussions which took place there. For though it was obvious from the very first that there were serious differences of opinion among the members, and that the most part of the dangers to each other, yet, by the blessing of God, they

These differences of opinion, as far as we are at present concerned with them, may be grouped around one important subject with which you will be familiar. The authority to be given to the General Synod. After the opening address of the Metropolitan, to which were greatly indebted for first setting the example of a truly Christian tone which was so happily preserved throughout the day, in setting the standing rules, and pointing the necessary officers of the Conference, the Chancellor of the Sydney Diocese, at the request of the Metropolitan, moved the first resolution for the appointment of a select committee to draw up a form of constitution for the General Synod. The representatives from a distant diocese well

The first resolution, however, moved by the learned and able gentleman, the following proviso: "It being a condition of this constitution that no set of the General Council shall be binding upon any Diocesan or Provisory until assented to by such Synod."—

Wherefore those words: they declare that the General Council was to have no real authority given to it; so in the very first step it was simply to appoint a select committee to draw up a constitution, the most difficult point in the whole constitution—the bone of contention was to be either quietly granted or solemnly discussed.

The former, Mr. Nicholls, as I feared, ed, were sitting in their right order, on the right hand of the President; and as I wished to avoid speaking myself, as much as possible, I often expressed my sentiments to my most reverend brethren near me, and when they agreed with me I took the power of them to give utterance to the thoughts. At the close of the conference the brethren I said to those near me, you must not suppose this advice can pass unchallenged; it decides that the General Council shall have no real authority, to which my dissent against myself is strongly opposed. It will therefore be warmly discussed, and this I think will be the cause of our deliberations, and we are for the most part strangers to each other; this proviso, then, should be omitted, and the Bishop of Melbourne at the proper time moved the omission of this letter for discussion, which is to be left for the consideration of the Synod under the Constitution. The Bishop of Melbourne at the proper time moved the omission of this letter for discussion, which is to be left for the consideration of the Synod under the Constitution. The Bishop of Melbourne at the proper time moved the omission of this letter for discussion, which is to be left for the consideration of the Synod under the Constitution.

On the subject which we are considering, our chairman stated that in Victoria they had an Act which enabled the bishop to form a Diocesan Synod, which has absolute authority over the Church in Victoria. Therefore any Diocesan Synod could have authority over the Diocesan Convention (or Assembly as it is called) of Victoria, or over the Provincial Synod when established. It would be a violation of law, illegal.

The Metropolitan in his opening address had expressed his opinion in these words:—"Synods already exist, and are not dependent on legislative sanction. It would not be prudent, others upon legislative sanction. It would not be prudent for the latter to place themselves in absolute sub-minations to the General Synod. They may agree that the resolutions of the General Synod upon subjects of a general character, or which the General Synod may regard as of interference, shall be binding upon the churches, and around this they cannot go. It would not be lawful for me to do so.

Having myself a great reverence for law, and being well persuaded of the evil of trying to resist or evade it, I at once in this committee yielded to the strongest of our chairmen, that there was a legal difficulty in the way of establishing a General Synod with authority over the Diocesan Assembly of Victoria. The committee then agreed to give authority to the deliberative body of the General Synod, and to give it no authority in its own constitution.

It is in my opinion, that it is not possible to do so, at least as it stood as it had no real authority. It would not my mind, however, was not satisfied as to this declared difficulty which would prevent the General Synod from passing either of the resolutions. I thought I would raise the question again, until I found time, even amid the interruption of the General Conference, to consider it thoroughly. It then came to the conclusion that there was a salient in the supposed opposition of two quite different kinds of authority.

All the members of our Church in Victoria were bound to obey the laws of their Synod by legal coercive authority, and no party exterior to their Synod, except the Parliament, especially no party out of Victoria, could claim legal or ecclesiastical power over their Church. But the General Synod of the Province of Canada, and the General Synod of the United States, were not parties exterior to the Synod of the Province of British Columbia.

to the General Synod. Its power or authority could be derived only from mutual consent. It said only, "Those dioceses who refused to receive its determinations must come to belong to it." And the only real solution seemed to be that the General Synod at every diocese, in union with the General Synod, could have the opportunity afforded it, before it was actually bound by any determination of the General Synod, to consider it in Synod, and to decide—"We do, or do not, receive this binding up." It was binding upon the Victoria perhaps could not bind itself to accept all future determinations of the General Synod as binding upon its diocese so soon as such determinations were passed, because determination of the General Synod might possibly, the Synod, and you used the word, "Synod" would not not be to binding until it was repeated. But when my termination of the General Synod was placed before the nod of Victoria, and accepted by it, that Diocese had full power to repeat the law opposed to the General Synod, and to repeat the law which was stated, and to declare such determination to be binding on the diocese. In this case the Diocese of Victoria would main in union with the other dioceses of the General nod; whereas, if it refused to accept the determination of the General Synod, and to repeat my law which I pose that determination, it would cease to be one of those dioceses.

Having arrived at this conclusion, I drew up the follow-resolution, which is afterwards proposed in the General Conference as an amendment to a part of the constitution, — that the provisions relating to that determination of the General Synod should be binding upon the Church in any diocese, unless and until such determination shall have been accepted by the Church in that diocese." I suggested to leave out all the words after the word "I say," and substitute the following: "I say that the words, 'until (he) had the opportunity of approving thereof in a next session of his Synod.'"

Before this amendment was proposed, I had the privilege of saying it before high legal authority, who had then read our General Convention's constitution to the Convention. This question,—"Is there any legal objection to the passing this amendment?" The clear decision answer, after

When I proposed my amendment, as reported in the 1966 issue of the Journal, I had been delighted to hear the

Mr. William Sewall trusted that none of the Dissenters who he displayed to reject any of the decisions that might arrive at under this Constitution. No decision of the Council Syndic ought to be so rejected. No dissent would probably at a misprint for should! ever isolate itself from the rest, or only partially accept what should now be by common consent determined on. The declaration of no dissent, expressed in the following manner.

In strict accordance with those sentiments, I further gathered from the conversation mentioned above (which, from my own impression of it) that it was considered the
